ARTICLE VII

FIDUCIARY POWERS

A. In the administration of any property forming part of any trust established under this instrument, the Trustee(s) is authorized and empowered, without court authority, to exercise all powers conferred by law upon trustees or expressed in this instrument as a Trustee, in her or their discretion, determines to be in the best interests of the beneficiary.

B.1. The Trustee(s) shall have the power to determine the manner of ascertaining income and principal and the allocation and apportionment of receipts and disbursements between income and principal.

2. The Trustee(s) is authorized to allocate different kinds or disproportionate shares of property among the beneficiaries or trusts, without regard to the income tax basis of specific property allocated to beneficiaries or trusts and determine the value of such property.

3. The Trustee(s) is authorized to enter into transactions with other fiduciaries, including the trustees and executors of other trusts and estates in which any beneficiary under this instrument has any interest, and including herself or themselves as fiduciary for other estates and trusts, and in such transactions to purchase property or make loans or notes secured by property, even though similar property constitutes a large portion of the trust property, and to retain any such property or note as if it had been an original part of the trust.

ARTICLE VIII

RESIGNATION OF TRUSTEE

A.1. Any trustee may resign by giving written notice, specifying the effective date of his or her resignation, to the Settlor during the Settlor's life or to the beneficiaries then entitled to the trust income.

2. If any Trustee resigns or is unable or refuses to act, successor trustee or trustees may be appointed as trustee by a written instrument delivered to him or her
